

PRESS RELEASE

20 years of metal in one song

Norwegian band SLAVES TO FASHION continue to honor 50 years of metal. In 2020 the band is releasing one new song every month that is inspired by and pays tribute to the different time periods and subgenres of heavy metal. All the songs will make up the concept album "The History of Heavy Metal".

The tenth and final single, "Too Close (to See Clearly)", is now out. It pays tribute to the last 20 years of the metal genre. This period witnessed the rise of great subgenres like symphonic metal, folk metal and different kinds of metalcore. Also, new creative genres like black 'n' roll, blackgaze, kawaii metal and more are represented in the 4-minute song.

"I'm sure we missed something," band leader and historian Torfinn Sirnes says, "because it's impossible to see the full picture without the necessary historical distance. But we got a lot of cool genres thrown in there. We might do another shot at it in 10 years to get it right!"

Listen to the "Too Close (to See Clearly)" here: <https://youtu.be/klgESYJqzwE>

Album teaser: https://youtu.be/zW4ABZ_My_c

Electronic Press Kit: <https://www.slavestofashion.net/epk>

